TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE TWENTY-FIFTH ANNUAL SESSION OF THE CENTRE CO. TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

Pursuant to a call of the County Superintendent the Twenty-fifth Annual Session of the Centre County Teachers' Institute convened at Bellefonte, in Reynolds' Hall, Dec. 26, 1871, at 9 o'clock. House called to order by the County Superintendent R M. Magee, Esq. (Ex. Officio.) Opened with prayer by Prof. J. S. Roberts. The President's remarks to the Institute were to the point, urging all teachers in attendance to be prompt and regular in their attendance at the different sessions, and to take notes of everything that may be said, that would prove of interest to their respective schools, also urging upon teachers to deport themselves in a proper manner, so that no reproach may, whatever, be brought upon the Institute, also urging upon teachers to endeavor to make the Institute a success—that the success of the Institute depended entirely upon themselves. His remarks were well received. In the absence of the Sec elect, the Institute elected Mr. W. C. Hinely as Secretary, and J. H. Zeigler, as Roll Clerk, Mr. A. Tobias, as Reporter, G. L. Morlock, Ass. Sec. and E. C. Woods, as Door Clerk.

The following resolutions were handed in and adopted:

Resolved, That the time for opening and closing the Institute be as follows, viz: Morning, at 9 o'clock, close at 12. Afternoon, at 1.30 o'clock. Evening, at 7.30.

Resolved, That no member of the Institute be permitted to leave any of its sessions without permission from the chair.

Resolved, That in discussing the different topics brought up before the Institute, no member shall speak more than five minutes on the same, without leave from the Chair.

Resolved, That a committee of teachers act as advisory officers in connection with the city police to maintain order during the different sessions of the Institute.

The President appointed as committee on Finance, Messrs. D. F. Fortney, R. W. Rumbarger, Fergus Potter, and Mrs. Cambridge. Com. on Resolutions, Messrs. G. L. Morlock, W. A. Jacobs, and A. Shaffer, Misses Mary Klinger and Jennie McCormick. Com. on Nominations, A. W. Brumgard, L. C. Mitchell, and Jemima Tibbens.

Prof. Roberts of the Bellefonte Academy, took up the subject of Grammar, and said:

1. The importance of the study. It deserves our respect on account of its great antiquity. Co-ordinate with mathematics in the attention of scholars of all ages. Languages and mathematics may be divided the thoughts of the educated world in all times. Grammar has received this attention on account of its value as a mental gymnastic, exercising attention, judgment, comparison, taste and comprehension. It differs therein from mathematics. Each has its own character and worth. Grammar more particularly exercises the critical faculties; Mathematics, those of invention. Grammar presents propositions to the mind already made and submitted to its analytical investigation. Mathematics, on the other hand are more synthetical, requiring, out of given materials or elements a statement or proposition to be made.

2. Yet, it must be admitted that grammar too, as a whole and in all its parts, is a synthetical character; for example: Any treatise on this subject must be considered as an attempted, but more or less imperfect symbol, exponent or relation of the multitudenous and wide spread facts or data of language. The perfect equation, the thorough generalization, digestion and expression of the facts, the Grammarian for excellence, the ideals whose realization is yet future, and which, perhaps, will always remain so; for the modes of conceiving; and stating the facts of language vary with the genius and vigor of the individual observer, and with the intimacy of his acquaintance with the laws of mind.

3. It hence appears, which is the important point, that Grammar is determined by Language and not Language by Grammar. The one is the fruit, interpretation and expression of the other, and not vice versa. Language is or should be, the law and norm of Grammar, and Grammar of Language.

In lecturing on and teaching this subject before this Institute, I shall confine my attention, by your permission, to that branch of English Grammar usually denominated Syntax, and to that one of the customary two-fold division of Syntax called Analysis.

ANALYSIS.

This division of Syntax may be considered, indeed, as embracing its whole substance in spirit, for Parsing and Analysis are essentially identical, the one being more particular, the other general. The one dealing with words only, the other with words, phrases and sentences, and so the one being a species of the other, Parsing being the species, and Analysis the genius.

Either may, therefore, be defined as a resolution, separation or analyses, in the strict sense of the word. (Greek ana and luo, meaning to untie, unloose,) accompanied by a synthesis, or indication of relationship.

ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

John struck James.

1. Analysis—First operation analytical, separating the sentence into its principal parts.

Second operation synthetical, giving reason for analysis by indicating relation of principal parts to each other.

2. Parsing—First operation, analytical, taking the words separately and considering their individual character.

Second operation synthetical, indicating their relations to one another.

Confining our attention to Analysis, technically socalled, observe:

1. That Analysis deals with the fundamental element of language, the word which has been defined as "the sign of an idea." (Illustrate 1.)

2. The phrase—Two or more ideas in a certain relation, but not constituting a complete proposition. (Illustrate 2.)

3. The sentence or clause—An assemblage of ideas that make a complete proposition or propositions, that express a thought or thoughts. (Latin, sententia; thought, sentence.) The sentence may embrace either or both phrases and clauses, and must contain single words. (Illustrate 3.)

Sentences—As to A. Form, are of 3 kinds: 1. Simple; 2. Complex; 3. Compound; either may be as to B. Nature, also of 3 kinds, viz: Declarative; Interrogative, and Imperative. What has been styled the exclamatory sentence will be found in most, it not all cases, to be an elliptical form of one of the others. (Illustrate 4.)

1. Simple Sentence—The simple sentence contains one and but one declarative, interrogative or imperative thought, or proposition. Just as the word is fundamental to the sentence, so the simple sentence is fundamental in relation to the complex and compound sentence, each of which is made up of simple sentences. (Illustrate 5.)

In treating, therefore, of the nature of the simple sentence, we exhibit in effect that of all. Every sentence, whatever its character consists essentially of two parts, a Subject and a Predicate.

Subject—That of which something is affirmed.

Predicate—That which is affirmed of the subject. (Illustrate 6.)

1. For symmetry and convenience, however, a sentence may be divided into three principal parts: 1. Subject; 2. Verb or Copula; 3. Either Subject or Attribute Verb or Copula is part of the predicate, and at the same time connects the rest of it with the subject. Object or attribute is the rest of the predicate connected by the copula to the subject. (Illustrate 7.)

Of these the first two, at least, are necessary to a sentence. (Illustrate 8.)

1. Subject of a simple sentence, A as to Form—1. Word or Words. 2. Phrase or Phrases. 1. Simple, Complx, Compound. 2. Infinitive or Participial. B as to Office—Substantive. (Illustrate 9.)

2. Copula or Verb—Word or Words. (Illustrate 10.)

3. Either Object or Attribute. A. as to Form. 1. Word or Words. 2. Phrase or Phrases. 1. Simple, Complex, Compound. 2. Infinitive, Participial, Prepositional. B. as to Office—Substantive or Adjective. (Illustrate 11.)

2. Adjuncts or Modifiers—Additions to either of the principal parts of a sentence to modify or limit its meaning. A. as to Form, 1st. Primary or those added to the principal parts, and (b) secondary or those added to the Primary. 2. A Word or Words. B Phrase or Phrases. B as to Office—Adjective, Explanatory, Adverbial. (Illustrate 12.)

1. Adjuncts of Subject—A. as to Form, 1. Word or Words. 2. Phrase or Phrases. 1. Simple, Complex, Compound. 2. Prepositional, Infinitive, Participial. B. as to Office—Adjective or Substantive. (Illustrate 13.)

2. Modifiers of Copula—A. as to Form. 1. Word or Words. 2. Phrase or Phrases. 1. Simple, Complex or Compound. 2. Prepositional, Infinitive Idiomatic. B as to Office—Adverbial. (Illustrate 14.)

3. Modifiers of Object or Attribute—A. as to Form 1. Word or Words. 2. Phrase or Phrases. 1. Simple, Complex, Compound. 2. Prepositional, Infinitive, Participial. B. as to Office—Adjective or Substantive. (Illustrate 15.)

2. Complex Sentence. 1. Complex sentence is really a species of simple sentence. For no matter how many clauses it may contain, it announces but one complete thought or proposition.

It may then be defined as substantially, a simple sentence, whose subject, object or attribute, is either a clause or clauses or as well as the copula is modified by a clause or clauses.

Completing then the trinities of the above formulas.

1. Subject of a Complex Sentence—A. as to Form, may be 3 Clause or Clauses. I. Simple, Complex, Compound. 2. Conjunctive, Pronouncial, Adverbial. B. as to Office—Substantive or Adjective. (Illustrate 16.)

3. Either object or attribute. A. as to Form. 3. Clause or Clauses. 1. Simple, Complex, Compound. 2. Conjunctive, Pronouncial, Adverbial. B. as to Office—Substantive or Adjective. (Illustrate 17.)

2. Adjuncts or Modifiers. A. as to Form. 1. Primary and Secondary. 2. C—Clause or Clauses. 1. Simple, Complex, Compound. 2. Conjunctive Pronouncial, Adverbial. B as to Office, Adjective, Explanatory, Adverbial. (Illustrate 18)

1. Adjuncts of Subject—A. as to Form. 3. Clause or Clauses. 1. Simple, Complex, Compound. 2. Conjunctive, Pronouncial, Adverbial. B as to Office—Adjective or Substantive. (Illustrate 19.)

2. Modifiers of Copula. A as to Form. 3. Clause or Clauses. 1. Simple, Complex, Compound. 2. Conjunctive, Adverbial, Prepositional. B as to Office—Adverbial. (Illustrate 20.)

3. Modifiers of Object or Attribute. A. as to Form. 3. Clause or Clauses. 1. Simple, Complex, Compound. 2. Conjuntive, Pronouncial, Adverbial. B as to Office. Adjective or Substantive. (Illustrate 21.)

3. Compound Sentence.—Two or more simple sentences or two or more complete sentences connected by conjunctions. (Illustrate 22.)

JOHN S. ROBERTS.

The Institute then adjourned.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

Institute called to order by the President. Prayer by Prof. Thomas. Roll call. Dr. Kirk, of Bellefonte, was introduced and delivered a lecture on Physiology, and Hygiene. He outlined the different topics, on the blackboard, and said:

Except the Physician, and the true and scientific Teacher fills the highest and noblest position of usefulness to his fellow-being. The Teacher moulds and develops the immortal principle or mind. He is morally responsible for the instruction imparted to the young intellect entrusted to his care—also accountable for that knowledge which should have been inculcated but neglected. The neglect of the subjects of Anatomy, Physiology and Hygiene in our common schools a very grave omission. As soon as a child can read it should receive instruction on these subjects. The great aim of life is happiness. To be happy we must have health and understand the laws of our being. All goodness, all happiness and health consists in obeying, and all badness, misery and disease in violating those laws. Happiness, goodness and health mean the same thing, while suffering sinfulness and death are also identical. The principles of those subjects which teaches the immutable laws that govern our being should be taught early. A child can comprehend Anatomy, Physiology and Hygiene as easily as the principles of Arithmetic or Penmanship, and is much more interesting A knowledge of these subjects teaches the child as well as the man, better, its duty to itself, its duty to its fellow being, and its duty to its God.

Instrumental music by Miss Devling, of Bellefonte.

TUESDAY EVENING.

Institute called to order by the Prest. at 7.30. Prayer by Rev. Crittenden, of Bellefonte. The President introduced Rev. Jas. Mullin, of Bellefonte, who delivered a lecture on "Intellectual Progress of Society." This lecture will be published in full in another issue of the REPUBLICAN.

The President then introduced Prof. J. W. Shoemaker, of Philadelphia, who delivered a lecture on "How to say Things."

"In all the affairs of time there is a right and a wrong. In saying things there is a right and a wrong way. The right may differ in kind, the wrong does differ vastly in degree. 1st. By giving the wrong meaning. 2nd. By failing to give them their whole meaning. 3rd. By giving them no meaning at all. Thirdly needs an explanation. We refer to that kind of utterance which robbing words of all their attractions fails to get audience of the ear and as a legitimate result, the words become meaningless to the judgment. Some very good things are said very badly and produce but little or no effect. Some very indifferent things are said so well that they produce wonderful effect."

The speaker here gave illustrations of correct and incorrect expression in eloquence, theology, &c., and concluded with the recital of the same anecdote, illustrating with wondeaful success the contrasted effect of the proper and improper saying of it

He argued that the senses were but highways to the soul, and that the sense of hearing like the other, must be gratified before it could possibly become the medium of influence that could favorably affect the judgment.

The speaker then gave various amusing and truthful impersonations of the manner in which things are often said touching the different stages of life from the school-boy to the representatives of the pulpit and the bar.

He concluded with an eloquent apostrophe to language as the vehicle of thought.

Select Reading by Mrs. Shoemaker. "Charcoal Man" was loudly applauded—also "various Sects in Heaven"

Adjourned.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

Institute called to order, by the President at nine o'clock. Scripture Reading by the Institute. Roll call. Reading of Minutes of Tuesday's proceedings. Adopted. Superintendent Magee made some pertinent remarks, urging all teachers to be more prompt in their attendance.

Professor Shoemaker took up the subject of elocution. He said that the subject of elocution is one of the greatest importance, and one in which all teachers should be and are interested. He outlined "Elocution Introductory." 1st. Its importance divided into several classes. Viz: 1st, In Social life. He urged upon the teachers to see to the conservation of the pupils in the school room and upon the play ground. Pay attention to tone and distinct utterance. 2nd, in "Business Life." 3rd, in "Public Life." 4th in "Physical Development." He said that in this development, the throat and breathing should be looked to especially. He then compared Conservation to Reading. He cited a few cases to show the close analogy of the two. He says pay attention to discipline in reading classes, as it is entirely necessary to good reading. He then drilled the Institute on discipline. He says that order and disorder are contagious. Gave positions of the body. "Active and Passive." He says, teach to know and be self, and not another. Quite an amusing drill on, "Is John at home?" Music by Miss Anna M. Cooper. Questions on Theory.

Lesson II.—1. How many, and what school records should be kept? also state form and object of each.

2. How may tardiness be prevented, and how punished?

3. What measures do you adopt to secure regularity of attendance?

4. What system of marking do you consider best in the class-record, and why?

5. In what manner, and how frequently, should parents be informed of the conduct and progress of their children?

Question 1st. Answer by Shaffer. Cooper's class register and School diary recommended as best. President recommends three records to be kept. Viz: of conduct, attendance and progress. The question then arose in regard to the practicability of these registers; discussed by Spangler, Shoemaker and others.

Question 2nd. Answer by Fredericks. Principle cause of tardiness, indifferance on the part of parents and pupils. Best preventative by getting them interested in the progress of the school, discussed by Weirick, Thomas and Shoemaker.

Question 3d. Answer by John Kline. 1st, That everything in and around the school house be made neat and pleasant. 2d, That the exercises be made interesting. 3d, By co-operation of the parents; discussed by Weirick; Morelock said he thought publishing percentage of attendance in the county papers. Prof. Roberts, make the school attractive. Love your pupils. Prof. Thomas, who thinks the Theory better than the practice. Mr. Spangler,—If the pupils have not their hearts in the school room they will not be there themselves.

4th. Answer by S. K. Emerick, who adopts the following grade, from 0 to 5: 5 very good, 4 good, 3 middling, 2 poor, 1 very poor, 0 failure. Spangler brought up the question of want of time Discussed by Meyers, Morelock, Magee and Roberts.

5th question. Answer by Miss Sadie Huey, who thinks a personal interview better than written reports. Referred to Prof. Shoemaker, answer this A. M. Application by Meyers. 1st question, should be three; conduct, and class and attendance, might dispense with conduct. 2 question; 1; prevented by good example. 2; by having an interesting exercise in the morning. Punished by having the pupil make up lost time after school.

3d. 1st, Require excuses either written or oral. 2, make the school room and grounds attractive. 3. Get the pupils interested in their studies. 4th, co-operation of the parents.

4th Almost any will answer.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

House called to order by the President at 1. 30. Opened with prayer by Ex Sheriff Conly. Remarks by Mr. Rumberger on finances, urging all to purchase tickets to the entertainment, so as to curtail the expenses of the Institute. Roll call. Music by Miss Nolan of Tyrone; songs "Dying, Egpyt, Dying," "Under the Daisies," were received with great applause, and sung with great effect. Select reading by Mrs. Shoemaker, "Katie Lee and Willie Gray," were read in a clear, bold and forcible voice, eliciting the admiration of all present.

Prof. Shoemaker then resumed his drill on Elocution. Prefaced his remarks by saying that the great fault of bad reading is at the bottom of first, instruction. "Primary instruction" all important. Every teacher should have some definite plans. Primary instruction.—Is the latter taught best on the board, teach letters from sentences, but teach one at a time and impress them thoroughly as you go, upon the mind, then teach the word. He took a hat and fully illustrated his method to the satisfaction of all, and quite amusing. He says, always teach words and sentences by objects and illustration. He would teach the letter and sound at the same time. Says, will recognize time. Then took up "Advanced Instruction." Would commence this topic, take the 3d Reader. Would assign the lesson. 1st. Teacher read the lesson, fully prepared, in order that the scholar may bring out the proper expression. 2d. Pupil prepares the lesson. 3d. Give back the lesson, that is, the preceding lesson, and see whether they know what defects were in the previous lesson and the subject of the lesson. He then read a part of "Forty years ago," showing his plan of this method. 4th "Word Preparation." Would assign a part of a lesson. Pronounce the words backward. If a word is missed, have the whole class spell it. Then give definition of words. 5th. Expression. 6th. Review by merit. The pupils that have the best merit marks, would read the whole lesson, then each one. He then read a selection, "Orator Puff." A vote of thanks tendered to Prof. Shoemaker by the Institute. Songs by Miss Nolan, "A Medley" and "Trundle Bed." Loud and continued applause. Adjourned.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

According to announcement no session of the Institute was held, in order to give place for Elocutionary Entertainment by Mrs. R. H. Shoemaker of Philadelphia, proceeds to be applied towards defraying expenses of the Institute. House called to order by Superintendent Magee at 8 o'clock; introduced Mrs. Shoemaker to a very large, respectable and appreciative audience, who read the following select pieces: 13th chapter of 1st Cor., Over the River, High Tide on the Coast of Lincolnshire, Selection from Widow Bedott, Death of Little Joe, Excelsior, The Senator's Predicament with the Beautiful Widow in Italy, The Bugle Call, Barbara Freitchie, Birdie looking Out for Me, Widower's lament for his lost wife, Poe's Raven. Mrs. Shoemaker read and recited the above pieces with great effect, receiving frequent applause, by the entire audience. The Milesburg String Band furnished Music for the occasion; also Miss M. H. Nolan of Tyrone. She sang several appropriate songs, which were very highly appreciated and long continued applause resulted. Adjourned.

THURSDAY MORNING.

Institute called to order by the President, at 9 o'clock. Scripture lesson by the Institute. Roll call. Singing by the Institute—"Beautiful River." Piano accompaniment by Miss Nolan. Reading of minutes. Approved. Prof. Roberts resumed the subject of Grammar. Song—"Ring the Bell," by members of institute. Select reading by Mrs. Shoemaker—"The Creed of the Bells." Mrs. Shoemaker then took up the subject of elocution. She says rules in elocution are unnecessary, but principles. Go by the sentiment and expression. She then furnished a number of printed slips, and every teacher supplied with an analysis of Elocution. 1st. Define Elocution; 2d. Treatment, divided into speech and gesture. Speech divided into "Abstract Vocal Culture," Articulation, 3d. Expression, Gesture, Position, Facial expression, Movement of the body. "Vocal Culture,"—(that a person must go under training to make an Elocutionist,) divided into Philosophy of voice, Utterance, Breathing, Utterance divided into quantity and development. Articulation into Voice sounds. Breath sounds and Union sounds. Modulation divided into Pitch, Force, Time and Slide. She then took up the topic of "Philosophy of Voice," and explained it fully by drilling the Institute. (A dispatch just received announcing that Supt. A. R. Horne, of Williamsport, will not be here: cause, sickness in family.) Outlined "Reading Exercises" on the board and drilled the Institute. Adjourned.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

Institute called to order by the President at 1:30. Opened with prayer by H. T. Harvey, Esq. Song by Miss Nolan "Beautiful Gates Ajar." Roll call. Dr. Kirk then gave a lecture on "Hygiene of the School room." Song by Miss Nolan—"Dying, Egypt Dying!" Theory of Teaching conducted by the Superintendent.

Lesson III.—1. What are some of the obstacles that prevent a systematic classification, in ungraded schools, and how best overcome?

2. To what extent should oral teaching be practiced, what topics, and how conducted?

3. What is the teacher's duty in regard to procuring books for the pupils?

4. What use do you make of the outline maps? How conduct a general exercise on the same?

5. What is your plan for calling out, and dismissing classes?

6. How do you conduct an exercise in penmanship?

Question 1st, answered by Secretary, want of books, too much ambition in the pupils. Morelock—Thinks not ambition but rather a lack of time an obstacle. Spangler left the question and approached that of duty of teacher and want of time, in the School room which he discussed for some time. Morelock, Irregular attendance of the pupils a great obstacle. Prof. Thomas—rapid progress of some pupils, either keep them back or have poor classification, but rather the latter than the former. Meyers thinks we have too many branches of study. Prof. Roberts—That the authorities should provide all the books for the pupils, thinks it would be better to have no books and use the blackboard.

Question 2d. Should vary with capability of the pupils. Dr. Calder agrees with the above. Mease—That all branches should to some extent be taught orally. Kline—The fundamental principles of all branches should be taught orally. R. J. Armstrong wants to know how we should teach orally; answered by Kline, begin with the rudiments and teach them thoroughly. Armstrong—that no rules can be laid down how far we should teach orally and how far to use the books. Teacher should use his own judgment. It may be applied to some extent in all branches.

Some men and teachers can use the oral method, while others can not. The oral and book must be blended. Teacher must understand his pupils, must be the master of the mind of his pupils. Hastings—That all explanations are oral teaching.

Question 3d. Spangler thinks it is not the teacher's duty to purchase books for the pupils. Hastings—Buys the books himself when the parents are too poor. Moerlock—I buy the books myself, and as a general thing the parents pay for them after. Roberts—If the parents refuse to pay, hand in the bill to the directors and have them pay for them. Prof. Thomas—Thinks that that would not work well. Reference to School law by Magee.

Question 4th. Have the pupils recite in concert on the maps. Weirick—What will you do if you have no maps. Thomas—Make them on the blackboards. Armstrong—Thinks there is not a teacher in the county who can draw a map on the board. Contradicted by Kline. Hastings—Geography can be taught without the textbook by using maps and blackboards. Armstrong, I mean that the teachers can not draw a perfect map. Thomas—A perfect map is not necessary in teaching Geography. Roberts—A teacher should never go into the recitation room until he has mastered the lesson to be taught.

Question 5th. Miss Irvin—I use bell, 1st tap rise, 2d., take places in the class, return in the same manner.

Question 6th. Miss Lucas—Begin the exercise with the bell and close the exercise in the same manner. Morlock—Sends some of the class to the board to make the letters, then have the class criticise them.

Application by Rearick.

1st question completely answered.

2d question. The more books the pupils have the better for them. Should teach arithmetic orally entirely.

3d Question. The parents will generally purchase the books themselves if asked.

4th Question. Use the concert method, and use the maps in teaching History.

BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN.

BELLEFONTE, PA.

MARRIED FOR LOVE.

"And so you are married, Melvil; Rather a rapid proceeding for a curate just ordained. By the by, did you not say you were married before you were ordained?"

"Yes; before I took my degree."

"I would have kept you out of that folly, if I had been at hand, at any rate. And of course, you are as poor as church mice?"

"As poor as church mice—not a doubt about that;" and the young clergyman glanced round his little cottage study, which was luxuriously furnished with two cane chairs, and a low railed chair, cushioned with grey chintz, which indicated feminine occupation, a stained neat table, and heaps of books piled on shelves fitted into the walls. It was summer time, and as the window was open to the lawn, with a framework of creepers all around it, and the sun shining in, it did not look so very disconsolate as might have been supposed. Mr. Melvil had often thought it a happy retreat before; but he fancied it poverty-stricken now, because his wealthy college friend seemed to pity him for having nothing better.

"Married for love?" suggested his friend, ironically.

The curate contemplated the threadbare knees of his black trousers for a minute or two, and then said, confusedly, "No!"

Not married for love, yet so indiscreetly tied up! How was it then, pray?"

"I'll tell you—it was for pity."

"Could not have had a worse motive; but that's by the way—go on."

"You remember Sandys—our tutor?"

"Yes—good fellow."

"Too good by half. He provided for everybody but his own family, as if he meant to live for ever, then at the most inconvenient season possible he died, and his income died with him. There was the widow and the two boys, and there was Clary—you recollect Clary?"

"Yes; the wild little gypsy; but you surely did not marry her?"

"Yes; Clary is my wife."

"Why, she must have been a baby!"

"She was sixteen within a few weeks after we were married. You see, the little thing came to me crying, and saying that she was to be sent to some horrid school, where she did not want to go——"

"I perceive; and you being soft-hearted, invited her to become your wife on the spot?"

"Precisely so."

"And she, blushing celestial rosy red, answered that she should be very glad?"

"Mamma consented promptly, and the sacrifice was accomplished," said the curate, in mock heroic style. "Clary is a good girl, but I never was in love with her. Is it not that sagacious worthy, Sir Thomas Moore, who says we never ardently love that for which we have not longed? I never thought of Clary, except as a child, until pity for her forlornness surprised me into the commission of matrimony."

If Mr. Melvil and his friend had been quick eared, or less absorbed, they might have heard a light step crossing the turf as they talked together, and retreating fast—just as the last words were spoken. It was Clary. Neither of them, however, saw either the approach or the flight, and they went on talking quite composedly.

"Benham offered me his London curacy; but Clary hates London, so I took this, and thought myself very lucky. We got the cottage cheap, and eighty pounds a year—a decent starving for the three of us—we have a treasure of an Irish servant besides ourselves to feed."

"And how many more by-and-by?" insinuated Mr. Warenne, spitefully.

Just in time to prevent a reply, the treasure of an Irish servant opened the study door, and announced in her rich brogue, "Please sir, tay's ready in t'dhrawing room, and misses is waiting."

"Come along then, Warenne. I wonder whether Clary will recognize you."

The two gentlemen crossed the passage to the opposite parlor, which Nora signified as the 'dhrawing room,' and found the young mistress of the house seated before the tray, prettily dressed in a clear blue muslin, with her soft brown hair flowing in wavy curls, and with a smile on her rosy mouth—the little hypocrite! Her heart was fit to break under that gently swelling bodice, where she had so daintily fastened a cluster of George's favorite flowers. She had attired herself in her best, to do her husband's friend honor, and as Mr. Warenne shook hands, and received the welcome of an old acquaintance, he thought in his own mind that—the indiscretion of the marriage apart—she was as comfortable a little wife as a man need desire to posses. She was not exactly pretty, but she looked very nice and lovable; her skin was so clear, her complexion so pure, her fingers so girlish and graceful. Then all her ways were quiet and gentle; she had affectionate eyes, and an expression sensible as well as sweet, and her voice was as musical as a bird's. Unless Mr. Melvil had told his friend in so many words that he was not in love with his wife, Mr. Warenne would never have discovered it, for the curate was as assiduous in his attentions to her as if there were their courting days.

Clary gave no sign that anything had harpened to grieve her; but she was relieved when tea was over, and George went out with Mr. Warenne to show him the village, which was considered pretty by strangers, and which had been heaven to her. She had been very happy with her young husband, and had found nothing wanting to her content; but now, as the two walked away through the garden, she stood watching them with clasped hands and the tears in her sunny eyes, repeating under breath, "George said he did not love me; he married me for pity! What shall I do! What shall I do?"

Perhaps many young wives in Clary's painful position would have made a virtue of proclaiming their wrongs, and inflicting misery on themselves and their helpmates; but not so with George's girl-wife. Her first impulse was against herself, that she should have been so blind as not to see that it was a sacrifice and not a joy to him to marry her; but then she reasoned that it was done, irrevocably and that she could only fret and disturb his peace by betraying what she had accidentally overheard; so she kept it to herself, and only tried to make him love her better.

"Though he does not love me, I know he would miss me, and be very sorry if I were gone," she said in her heart; and after a while the sore pain the first stab had given her passed away, and the same bright face smiled by his hearth, the same affectionate sunshine filled his home as heretofore.

There was plenty of work in his parish for Mr. Melvil, for his rector was rarely at home; but the young clergyman took a conscientious view of his post and did his utmost. Clary was a great help to him. The cottagers liked her, and the school children liked her. The people, and the squire at the head of them, said the Melvils were an acquisition to the parish, and long might they stay there. The young wife especially was beloved; those who were in trouble said she seemed to know how to talk to them about faith, patience, and comfort better than the curate himself—though what trials could she have known at her age?

In the village there were many ladies, single and double, portionless and well dowered pretty and plain; but amongst the whole troop, had the curate been free to choose, he could not have found one to suit him half so well as Clary. Sometimes, I am sure, he must have gone home to the rest and peace of her presence with an elastic, masculine satisfaction, although he was not in love. For instance, when he called at Mr. Bennett, of the hall, and heard the squire depreciate her husband's sense and character, as if by the process she exalted her own; Clary would never depreciate his; if she had a fault, it was that she inclined to glorify him too much. Or, again, after a visit to Captain Wells, whose three pretty daughters were flounced, perfumed, and accomplished out of all nature and genuineness. They had sweet, expressionless faces, they lisped the saddest nonsense, and conducted themselves with regard to the duties of life more like butterflies than creatures endowed with souls; the very prettiest of them would have bored the clever curate to extinction in a month. Or the two Miss Frances, who flirted so dreadfully with the officers; or Miss Hardwood, who was so very rich, and fearfully ill-tempered; or Miss Briggs, who was rich also, but penurious, and very vulgar; or Miss Farsight, who was too scientific to mend her stockings; or Miss Diana Falla, who wrote poetry and rode to hounds; or the Misses Broughton, who were nothing particular. These ladies had their good points; but not one of them would have had Clary's charming little way of loving George better than herself. Only let him fear that he is going to lose her, and then, I think, he will find out that, though he is not in love, still he loves her very much.

Greenfield has its drawbacks as well as its delights, like other pretty villages; and one of the most serious of these was a tendency to low fever when the spring season had been unusually damp. A brook that ran across the green, overflowed in the rains, and when it retired to its bed, left behind a deposit which bred pestilential vapors that poisoned the lives of the people. The curate's cottage stood high, and out of the influence of the baleful exhalations; but his duties carried him to and fro amongst the poor, and exposed him daily to the contagion. No danger would have made him avoid these duties, heavier at this season than at any other; but when the fever was in the village he laid his commands on Clary, that she should stay at home; and Clary stayed, like the obedient little wife she was, instead of being foolishly heroic, and adding to his inevitable anxieties.

But Clary watched him with furtive tenderness all the time, and was ever ready with dry clothing and warm slippers when he returned home, to spare him the risk of cold. But what was to come to pass for all her love and all her care?

One stormy April night, after a long and fatiguing afternoon on the marsh, as the lower part of Greenfield was called, the curate came home, ready to sink with weariness, and complaining of a pain in his head, and sickness. Clary stole out of the room, and despatched the Irish treasure to summon the doctor. When the doctor came, he ordered George to bed, and said he hoped to see him up again in a few days. But, instead of improving, George grew worse; the fever ravaged his frame terribly, and he was delirious day after day. This went on to the climax of the disorder, and then it took a favorable turn; but a long season of uselessness and inaction lay before the curate. He must leave Greenfield for sea air, and lie by for months. Meanwhile his absence must be supplied by another clergyman.

The inevitable musts, so trivial to other people who have long purses, were purely and simply a sentence of destitution to the Melvils. George wanted to stay at home, and get additional help from his neighboring clergy; but Clary made up a determined little face, and said 'No.' They must go over to the Isle of Wight for the summer months, and regain health and strength for him, even if Greenfield had to be resigned altogether.

Clary managed somehow; she would not give details, on the plea that George must keep his mind quiet; and in the beginning of June they found themselves lodged in a retired farm cottage, standing in the midst of delicious meadows, with a view of a glorious bay, cliffs, and distant towns. They luxuriated in the beauty around them like a pair of happy children, and though George was not in love with his sunshiny little wife, he would have got on there very indifferently without her. She petted and indulged him to that extent that he grew stout, and strong, and selfish very fast indeed; and would sometimes have forgotten how very ill he had been, if she had not watched him and taken such extraordinary care of him. She liked to hear herself claimed in his short, imperative way; it showed, at any rate, that she was needful to him. If she had gone into the polished farm kitchen to superintend or to concoct with her own hands some wonderful tempting dish, to coax his delicate appetite, presently he was heard from the garden or parlor crying out "Clary, what are you doing? I want you!" Then when she appeared, with floury little paws, and fire-heated cheek, he would just look up at her and say, "Why do you run away, and leave me for hours together, Clary?" and she would laugh, and tell him she had not been gone ten minutes—what did he mean? and then disappear again.

Sometimes he would come into the kitchen itself, and sit down in farmer Hood's great chair, and follow her about with his hollow eyes, and finally take her off, with his arm round her waist—although he was not a bit in love, but only pitied her!

He was not allowed to study solemn books; but Clary permitted a little light mental ailment to be taken each morning and evening from certain thin blue magazines, which she borrowed from the library in the nearest village, which was slowly developing into a fashionable watering place. One evening, while she was doing a little of the fine darning, in which nobody recalled her, George, who had been for some time sitting silent over his book, broke out into his merry laugh, saying, "Listen here Clary; here are some beautiful verses! Hark how the lines limp! I wonder how the editor could print such stuff!"

He began to read the lines in a mock-heroic style, which certainly made them infinitely ludicrous. At first Clary colored a little; but before he came to the end she was laughing as heartily as himself.

He then volunteered to read a short story, entitled "Patience Hope's Trial," which he did with a running commentary such as. "That is bad grammar"—"The punctuation makes nonsense of every paragraph"—"High-flown rhapsodical rubbish," etc., etc.; and when he came to the end, he pronounced it the silliest little tale he had ever read. Clary darned on most composedly, and agreed with George that it was silly; but there was a mischievous sparkle in her eyes, as if she were sorely tempted to make a confession about that same silliest of little tales; however, reflecting that the shock of learning that he had a literary wife might be too much for his nerves in their present weak state, she discreetly held her peace, and contented herself by making him imbibe her earnings under various strengthening and agreeable forms.

Before the summer was ended the readers of the thin blue magazine were familiar with Clary's signature of "Ivy;" but after that she disappeared suddenly from its pages, to many people's regret, for its subscribers were not, as a rule, highly-trained, educated college gentlemen, but day-workers and toilers in the world's wide labor-field, who find an agreeable relaxation in the perusal of a silly little tale, whose interest turns on the humble daily virtues which they have so much occasion to exemplify in their own obscure lives. I believe the editor was inquired of twice why "Ivy" had ceased her contributions. "Ivy" was otherwise occupied.

In the first place, Mr. Warenne presented George with a small living, and there was a queer little rectory house to paint, paper, and generally embellish. Far be it from me to derogate from Clary's dignity, but I will tell one thing of her, because I think it was to her credit. The first time Mr. Warenne went to see his old friend, George was in his study, as usual, but it had been made to look more cosy and homelike than that at Greenfield, and the young rector looked proportionately more dignified in it. After a little desultory chat, George proposed to seek his wife—and how does everybody think they found her employed? She was papering her own drawing room that little drawing room which was afterwards the admiration of the whole neighborhood. Mounted on some steps, in a big apron, the property of the Irish treasure, with her own brown curls tucked behind her little ears, and with pasty hands, and sleeves rolled up above her dimpled elbows, she was sticking the pretty, simple paper upon the wall—the last bit of it. What did she do? Jump down in blushing horror at being caught in such deshabille, and cover everybody else with confusion? Not a bit of it. She looked radiantly over her shoulder, and said, "You must wait five minutes; then I'll speak to you!" and proceeded to finish her task, to the admiration of the Irish treasure, who had acted as her assistant; and also to the admiration—not a bit to the astonishment—of Mr. Warenne and George.

The work done, she descended; and as the gentlemen had got possession of the window seat, she placed herself on the lowest round but one of her ladder, and they all talked about the island, and the sea, and George's recovery, and the new rectory, and other interesting topics; and Clary was so altogether bright, unaffected and charming that when George and his friend left her at length, the latter said, "Melvil, if Clary were not your wife, I should make up to her myself." And George actually laughed, and said he had better take care what he was about, or he should be obliged to quarrel with him and then he extolled her virtues very much, as if—as if he were in love at last; but this time Clary was no there to overhear.

This was Clary's first occupation; her next was different. Perhaps the physical and mental strain had been, for the last twelve months, almost too much for her youth; for those who loved her began to notice that her spirits flagged, and that her brisk feet went slowly to and fro on the garden walks. George watched her anxiously, but his friends told him to be patient, and wait awhile, and she would be better soon. But it is very hard to be patient when we see what we have learned to prize above all else in the world fading slowly before our eyes—and so Clary seemed to fade.

"George, you must take care of Clary, or you will lose her," her mother told him, abruptly, "I do not like her symptoms at all."

It was after this harsh communication for the mother spoke as if he were to blame for her child's fate—that George involuntarily betrayed to his young wife how much he feared for her.

"And you would grieve to lose me, George?" said she, a little mournfully.

"It would break my heart, Clary! Oh, don't talk of my losing you!" cried he, passionately kissing her thin white hands.

"Who have I in the world besides you? who loves me as you do?"

"I think nobody loves you as I do, George. It is selfish in me—but it is the happiest time I have had for a long while to see how you would be sorry if I were gone; I should not like to think you could forget me soon."

"Clary, you will live to bless me for many a year yet."

"That must be as God wills, George; let us both say that must be as God wills."

"As God wills, my darling," and George hid his face on Clary's bosom that she might not see his tears.

Perhaps the covetous, watchful tenderness that now surrounded the young wife revived her courage and strength, for she rallied visibly; and, after a few months, George had to baptize a little copy of herself, and to return thanks for Clary's safe deliverance. After that day nobody could have persuaded him that there had ever been a time when he was not in love with his wife, or when he did not think her the dearest treasure in the whole wide world.

There are three children at the rectory now, and it is one of the happiest homes that can be found in the country. Mr. Warenne, who has become more cynical than ever, quotes the pair as an exemplification of how well two people who are rightly matched in other things may get on through life without falling into that enthusiasm of love which hot-headed boys and girls esteem the grand climax of existence. One day, in the confidence of friendship, he was so ill-advised as to remind the rector of the confession he had formerly made to himself, and George was actually offended.

"Not in love with Clary! She is the only woman for whom I ever cared a ship" cried he; "you are under a delusion Warenne; I never could have said anything so absurdly false."

The rector thinks so now; and Clary is converted to the same opinion. I do not see what Mr. Warenne has to do with it. Bygones should always be bygones. Clary has never yet confessed about the silliest of little tales in the thin blue magazine; perhaps it has slipped her memory—but all her love, devotion, and patience of that time will never escape George's. If he knew who wrote "Patience Hope's Trial," he would probably be inclined to call it a "Gem of fiction" now, instead of what he did then, because he would see it from a real point of view.

Ant Power.

During a recent rain-storm some ants made the discovery that the position they had selected for a nest, although well up on the side of a bank, was flooded with water. How they managed to survive the freshet it is dificult to say, but next day they were seen working with great energy in moving eggs across the country to higher regions. They established a tortuous track, which was strictly followed, although an engineer, if they had one in their community, might have diminished the labor. We took the occasion to take the time of one individual. He was carrying a load, say at least equal to two-thirds of his own weight, mostly up hill and over many obstructions, and he took no time to rest, but rather seemed anxious to run ahead of his companions, which he did in several instances. He accomplished the journey of fifteen feet in seven minutes and forty seconds. At this rate it would have taken him forty five hours to travel a mile. The creature measured his own length, in the fifteen feet, one thousand four hundred and forty times, as his size was about the eighth of an inch. A man to measure his own length, say five feet six, one thousand four hundred and forty times, would travel a mile and a half, which he could not do in the time, with no load, no obstruction, and no up hill; while a load proportionate to the ants would, within a short distance, break his power of endurance. It is said that some ants can carry ten times their own weight.

Charity

Night kissed the young rose, and it bent softly to sleep. Stars shone and pure dewdrops hung upon its bosom, and watched its sweet slumbers. Morning came with its dancing breezes, and they whispered to the young rose, and it awoke joyous and smiling. Lightly it swung to and fro in all the loveliness of health and youthful innocence. Then came the ardent sun-god, sweeping from the East, and smote the young rose with its scorching rays, and it fainted. Deserted and almost heart-broken it dropped to the dust in its loveliness and despair. Now the gentle breeze, which had been gamboling over the sea, pushing on the homebound barque, sweeping over hill and dale, by the neat cottage and still brook—turning the old mill, fanning the brow of disease and frisking with the curls of innocent childhood—came tripping along on her errand of mercy and love, and when she fondly bathed its head in cool, refreshing showers, the young rose revived, and looked and smiled in gratitude to the kind breeze; but she hurried quickly away, singing through the trees. Thus charity, like the breeze, gathers fragrance from the dropping flowers it refreshes, and unconsciously reaps a reward in the performance of its office of kindness, which steals on the heart like rich perfumes, to bless and to cheer.

Whimsical Wills.

From the will of General Blacket, Governor of Plymouth, proved in 1792:—

"I desire my body to be kept so long as it may not be offensive, and that one of my fingers or toes may be cut off to secure a certainty of my being dead. I further request my dear wife that, as she has been troubled with one old fool, she will not think of marrying a second."

From the will of the Rev. Mr. Appleby, of St. Bride's proved in 1783:—

"I leave my body to be dressed in a flannel waist-coat, an old surtout coat, and breeches without lining and pockets; no shoes (having done walking,) and a worsted wig, if one can be got, in order that I may rest comfortably."

From the will of a Mariner of Bristol, proved in 1795.

"My executors to pay, out of the first moneys collected, to my beloved wife, if living, one shilling, which I give as a token of my love, that she may buy hazle nuts, as I know she is better pleased with cracking them than she is with mending the holes in her stockings."

An editor in Illinois having engaged a new reporter, received the following as his first effort: "We are informed that the gentleman who stood on his head under a pile driver for the purpose of having a right pair of ones drawn on, shortly afterwards found himself in Cuba, perfectly naked and without a cent in his pockets."

The four circus men who have been in the Wyoming county Jail since April, for the murder of John Saingler, at Tunkhannock, have been before the court, and on motion of prisoner's counsel, the case is to be put over to January sessions.

THURSDAY EVENING.

Institute called to order by the President at 7:30. Opened with prayer by Rev. Crittenden. Music—"Beautiful River!" by the Institute. Piano accompaniment by Miss Etta Butler. A selection was read by Mrs. Shoemaker—"Courtship under Difficulties!" [Great Applause.]

Dr. Calder of the Agricultural College was introduced to the audience and lectured on School Government. Teachers, he says, have great trouble in government. If parents have governed themselves, then there is no trouble, but if otherwise, then there is trouble. Is in favor of corporal punishment as well as moral suasion. Would not use extremes. If the rod is used, let it be used in a proper manner and not in an angry one. No code of laws to govern. Would use only one rule, viz., "Always do the best you can." Govern first yourself, then you are fit to govern others. Must teach them by example and precept. We should always bear in mind that we were school boys and girls as well as those under us. Make the school room attractive, out of doors as well as inside. Directors should take more interest in the arrangement of all connected with the building of School Houses. He said that teachers should not only teach one term but make it a profession. Should pay particular attention to the temperament of the pupil, and act wisely and discreetly, not to press more on them than the mind can bear; discover the good and bring that out. Humor the prejudices and whims to some extent, then show them better. Sympathize with them in their burdens but encourage them to go on. Bear no malice. Be firm if you are right and hold fast, do not give way. Never be too proud to admit an error if one is made. Have them know that you wish them to assist you in the control of the school; that they too have authority. A vote of thanks was tendered to Dr. Calder. A poem by special request was now read by Mrs. Shoemaker—"Will the New Year come to-night, Memma?" Very effective. Adjourned.

FRIDAY MORNING.

Institut called to order at 9 o'clock. Prayer by Mr. J. H. Zeigler. Roll call. Superintendent Magee made some remarks on drawing and singing, urging upon teachers to teach them in their schools. Also urging all teachers that do not now take the School Journal to subscribe at once. The President appointed Mr. Weaver and Mr. Frederick to solicit subscriptions to the "Educator" and School Journal. Minutes read and approved. Prof. Roberts resumed the subject of Grammar. Mrs. Shoemaker read a Poem, Annie and Willie's prayer, handed her by some citizen of Bellefonte. Applause. She then resumed the subject of Elocution. She would drill them in light gymnastic exercises. The whole Institute was now drilled. She says every person, but a mute, can have a pure tone of voice by culture. The simple pure voice is every day conversation. Drilled the class on the pure tone with the vowels. The orotund quality of voice is used in expressing the language of sublimity, grandeur, awe, and reverence. Use conversational reading in the schools as much as possible. Drilled the Institute on the various sounds of the vowels.

Questions in Theory. Lesson 4th, conducted by Magee:

Lesson IV.—1 How would you regulate the time for different recitations?

2. What should be made the opening exercise of a school, and how should such formal opening be conducted?

3. How should the daily Scripture lesson be conducted?

4. How far is the teacher responsible for the moral training of his pupils?

5. What course do you consider best to cultivate obedience, truthfulness, self-denial, honesty, etc., in pupils, and how often should such lessons occur?

6. How do you close and dismiss your school for the day?

Answer by Miss Downing. That all lessons requiring deep thought should be recited in the forenoon or morning. Cannot find time to hear all the recitations. Robert's pupils can recite much better in the morning as they are then fresh. Mrs. Shoemaker, three quarters of an hour a day should be given to a 4th reading class. The following number of classes that should be in each branch as given by the Institute: Reading 4. Written Arithmetic 3. Mental Arithmetic 2. Geography 3, Grammar 2. History 1. Spelling 2. Alphabet 1. Incidental Branches. Map Drawing, Physiology, Drawing, Music, Morality, Declamation, Composition.

Question 2d. Schools should be opened by devotional exercises, reading scriptures, singing and prayer. Further discussion postponed. Adjourned.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN

R. B. BARGER ..... PROPRIETOR

W. W. BROWN, ... EDITOR

Terms: $2.00 Per Annum in Advance.

BELLEFONTE, PA.

Wednesday Morning, January 3, 1872.

FOR GOVERNOR,

GEN. JOHN F. HARTRANFT,

Subject to the decision of the Republican State Convention.

☞ A complete file of the BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN may always be found at the offices of GEO. P. ROWELL & CO., Advertising Agents, 40 and 41 Park Row, New York, who are authorized to represent us in that city.

RAIL ROAD TO LEWISTOWN DIRECT.

We learn from one of our citizens, James Milliken, Esq., who has been instrumental in reviving the project of a Railroad to Lewistown through the seven mountains, that the matter now has the approval of all the railways which this enterprise will in short link, connect together, viz: The Penn'a R. R., the Lewistown and Sunbury R. R., the Bellefonte and Snow Shoe R. R., and the Bald Eagle Valley R. R., and, that with the early spring a thorough examination and survey, will be made of a route considerably west of former surveys—possibly extending into Stone Valley. The practicability of the route being established, the road will be constructed, for we cannot doubt that the benefits which will accrue to our large agricultural, mining and manufacturing interests, must insure this result. The present Railroad distance from Bellefonte to Lewistown is over ninety miles, by the proposed route it may not exceed forty seven, with less than thirty-five miles to construct, (with like saving to the sea-board cities), which will guarantee to this enterprise such a traffic in coal, iron, lumber, and manufactured products, as to render it at once remunerative on its legitimate cost.

We understand that this project will not in any way interfere with the Lewisburg and Spruce Creek Narrow Gauge road, which, if this road is built, will cross it in Pennsvalley and pursue its course to Tyrone, each the other in traffic benefitting.

We shall advocate for this undertaking the heartiest support, believing it one that will do much to develope and promote the material interests of this part of the State, more especially of Centre and Mifflin counties.

UP-HILL WORK.

The great Anti-Grant combination Says. the New York Times appears to be making very poor headway. The men who were announced as its leaders, and who were to give it its chief claim to respectability, are one by one dropping out of its ranks and disclaiming all connection with it. Senator TRUMBULL refuses to act the part assigned to him in the programme; Senator SUMNER hesitates to fire off his gun in the shape of a "one-term" amendment to the Constitution, and even HORACE GREELEY, perhaps miffed at the subordinate part which he was to be allowed to play in the farce stigmatizes the whole combination as a "back-stairs" arrangement, with which he will have nothing to do. The plan of the campaign, so far as it has yet been made public, is so puerile that it is no wonder any man of reputation hesitates to indorse it. And yet it is probably as good a plan as can be devised to accomplish a purpose so little sought by the great mass of the people. It furnishes the best proof in the world of the weakness of the opposition to Gen. GRANT, and of the absurdity of any combination among Republicans to defeat his reelection. While confessing that the main strength of the combination is to come from the Democratic Party, the sorehead Republicans hesitate to admit the Democracy to any open alliance with them. That the Democratic Party should, for one moment, countenance a programme that places them in such a humiliating attitude, only shows the depth of degradation to which the party has sunk. If they are to furnish all the fighting material why should they not have something to say in laying out the plan of the campaign?

The "passive policy" of the Democracy, and the nerveless policy of their allies, alike show that there is no solid, substantial ground of opposition to the Administration of Gen. GRANT; for if there were, there would be no need of these extraordinary combinations and "back-stairs" intrigues to defeat his re-election. Least of all would there be any need of the petty personal abuse and scandalous meddling with the President's private affairs which form the main staple of the opposition trades. Show to the people that there are any important principles at stake in the next Presidential election, and that they are likely to improve their condition or promote the better welfare of the country by a change in the Administration, and they might be disposed to listen to politicians who talk of defeating Gen. GRANT. But they are not going to make a change merely to gratify a few Republican politicians and disappointed office-seekers; least of all, to enable the Democratic Party to crawl into power again under false colors. The great mass of the people care nothing for office, or for those main business it is to seek office. If the Government is economically conducted, the revenues honestly collected, the taxes fairly adjusted and the peace and honor of the country maintained, they are satisfied, without running the risk of a change which might be for the worse. All these things have been done under Gen. Grant's Administration, if not to the entire satisfaction of everybody, yet to the general satisfaction of the country, and there is no reason to believe that a change would bring about any improvement.

Besides, there is a feeling of security in the country while Gen. Grant is President that would not prevail under another Executive, even though he might have more experience as a civilian and statesman. The revolutionary spirit still exhibited by a large portion of the Southern people, including many of the rebel leaders, is not calculated to make the loyal people of the country forget, as they would like to do, the events of the late civil war. If the declaration of universal amnesty, which we trust the President will be authorized to make before the adjournment of the present Congress, does not produce a better effect upon Southern feeling than the partial amnesty already granted has done, there will be just cause for apprehension that a large portion of the South has not accepted, and does not propose to accept, the results of the war as final. In such an event, the people choose to have Gen. Grant, above all other men, in the Presidential chair. They have perfect confidence in his fealty to the principles of the Republican party—in his devotion to the Union of the States and the supremacy of the flag—and they know from experience his ability to maintain those principles and defend that Union against all opposition.

THE REPUBLICAN PRESS OUTSPOKEN.

When Col. A. K. M'Clure wrote what may justly be called his able letter in reference to his own political chances, and giving his criticisms of the National Administration, he little dreamed of the manner of its reception by the Republican press of the State. M'Clure has always been a favorite with the press of the State. His bold and frank, generous and able course as a man and a politician, gave him an influence heretofore which he might have wielded to win bright honor for himself, but which he neglected to use, as he ought to have done. Yet with all this influence on his part, and the kindly feeling of his old cotemporaries, Col. M'Clure is not able to sway a single newspaper outside of Philadelphia, in opposition to the National Administration, and as a specimen of the style in which his letter is received, we quote the following from the Pittsburg Dispatch, one of the most independent Republican jourdal in the State:

"We do not join with him at all in regard to either the fitness or availability of President Grant, whether for renomination or re-election. We do not know precisely what a certain class of critics mean when they say there are others with more ability than President Grant. In special senses this may be true. He has not studied law, the sciences, statesmanship or diplomacy—yet we claim that he has other qualities which offset these accomplishments, and which, indeed are, in their place, more reliable. We should greatly fear to have Sumner, or Greeley, or many other able and brilliant men, for President. The reason is, that while they are cultivated, they lack certain elements of character, which General Grant possesses in a very eminent degree. President Grant was not elected to his office because he was deemed to be the best speaker, the best writer, or most profound thinker, or intellectually the most accomplished and cultivated man in the party, but because he had those elements of strength that made his nomination almost a condition of success to the party, and because he had developed traits of character as a general commanding the armies, honesty, integrity, purity of purpose, resolution in war, skill in controlling men, high, unimpeached patrotism, which convinced the people that he had been in military life. Nor do we see that he has done anything to destroy "the unity and purity of the party." We have not yet known of a case where President Grant has wantonly intruded upon the councils of the Republican party, or where he has failed to meet every pledge given by him in accepting his nomination. He has not succeeded in appointing 30,000 officers to fill 5,000 offices, but we doubt if even Mr. Sumner could do this.

For these reasons we doubt the wisdom of M'Clure's letter. All of his class seem to take it as admitted that Grant is an exceedingly inferior man—a point that is not assented to. He is believed by the masses to be pure, free from political entanglements, and specially well adapted for the position he holds. These views will lead to his nomination, and his triumphant re-election. To assert, therefore, that he is defective and unworthy, is to insult a class who are strenuous in the maintenance of these views. We shall watch the effect of this letter with curiosity. Our opinion is, it will add to the labor of M'Clure's friends if they are determined to force his nomination."

—That tells the story of Republican sentiment in Pennsylvania. It is a reflex of popular feeling which all the politicians in our borders cannot misdirect or change.

Wm. Dennis was arrested Saturday, in New York, for forcibly abducting, chloroforming and otherwise abusing a young school girl. One Madame Florence was also arrested as an accessory. Both were held in $5,000 bail for trial.

AYER'S AMERICAN ALMANAC, for the new year, has arrived for delivery gratis by all the Druggists, to all who call for it. This little annual has the largest circulation of any book in the world, made by the fact that it furnishes the best medical advice which is available to the people—enables them to determine what their complaints are and how to cure them. It contains the startling announcement of the conflagration of a world, or the combustion of one of the stars in the firmament with all its attendant planets.

THE AMERICAN WASHER?

PRICE $5.50

THE AMERICAN WASHER SAVES MONEY, TIME, AND DRUDGERY.

The Fatigue of Washing Day no Longer Dreaded, but Economy, Efficiency, and Clean Clothing, Sure.

In calling public attention to this little machine, a few of the invaluable qualities, (not possessed by any other washing machine yet invented,) are here enumerated.

It is the smallest, most compact, most portable, most simple in construction, most easily operated. A child ten years old, with a few hours' practice, can thoroughly comprehend and effectually use it. There is no adjusting, no screws to annoy, no delay in adapting! It is always ready for use! It is a perfect little wonder! It is a miniature giant, doing more work and of a better quality, than the most elaborate and costly. One half of the labor is fully saved by its use, and the clothes will last one-half longer than by the old plan of the rub board. It will wash the largest blanket. Three shirts at a time, washing thoroughly! In a word, the ablution of any fabric, from a Quilt to a Lace Curtain or Cambric Handkerchief, are equally within the capacity of the LITTLE GEM! It can be fastened to any tub and taken of at will

No matter how deep rooted a prejudice may exist against Washing Machines, the moment this little machine is seen to perform its wonders, all doubts of its cleansing efficacy and utility are banished, and the doubter and detractor at once becomes the fast friends of the machine.

We have testimonials without end, setting forth its numerous advantages over all others, and from hundreds who have thrown aside the unwieldy, useless machines, which have signally failed to accomplish the object promised in prominent and loud sounding advertisements.

It is as perfect for washing as a wringer is for wringing. The price another paramount inducement to purchasers, has been placed so low that it is within the reach of every housekeeper and there is no article of domestic economy that will repay the small investment so soon.

$5.50.

All that is asked for this GREAT LABOR SAVER, is a fair trial We guarantee each machine to do its work perfectly.

Protecting Grapevines.

A tender grapevine needs protection. But many, many are more hurt in protecting than the frost would have hurt them. We have tested this matter of protecting grapevines carefully, and, unless very tender sorts, we are satisfied it is better to have unprotected than to put down in the way it is usually or at least frequently done. A strain, even if but a light one, will affect the vine. If it is more severe, bending from the vertical to the level, a somewhat stubborn vine, and getting well down so as to afford full protection, there will be a perceptible hurt in the spring following. It will be seen in the check that part receives; and it will not be in full growth till about midsummer, and will not ripen its fruit so soon. If the strain is still greater, and the vine is older and more stubborn, there will be a serious hurt; the vine will lag in its growth and will not ripen its fruit unless late. Bend still more, and it will be a question whether the vine will live. It will be late in the spring before it will put forth any signs of life. Of course it be spoiled for the course it will be spoiled for the season. Sometimes the vine is split, the canes of the past summer's growth sometimes broken. This is where the growth has been raped and the handling is harsh.

Put down in the form of a bow, securing the top where the tender parts are, and let the snow cover them, or, if quite tender, secure with some material, being careful not to use what would invite mice. And never bend from one side to the other, put down where the branch is. This is a subject so important we cannot be too careful. Carefully done, there will in general be little or no harm done.

All hardy sorts we now leave up—whether the wood is ripened thoroughly or not for the frost may as well take what is not fit to grow. But wood well grown—season favorable and growth not too rapid, with no interference from excess of fruit—the severest frost will not hurt. Our Clintons and Concords have defied 25 degs. below zero, and changes of 40 degs. in twelve hours. They are used to it, being a native of this climate. And what little hurt they may be subject to from the cold and the change of temperature—at the most but a trifle with a good, well-ripened vine—is nothing compared to the hurt of putting down. This from experience. We secure our vine in the fall as we wish to have it in the spring, firm and proper on the trellis, pruning either in the fall or spring, say March. We get our best crops in this way, and uniform on the vine.—Exchange.

A BEAUTIFUL THOUGHT.—God knows what keys in the human soul to touch, in order to draw out its sweetest and most perfect harmonies. They may be the minor strains of sadness and sorrow; they may be the loftier notes of joy and gladness. God knows where the melodies of nature are, and what discipline will bring them forth. Some, with plaintive tongues, must walk in the lowly vales of life's weary day; others, in loftier hymns, sing of nothing but joy as they tread the mountain tops of life; but they all unite without discord or jar as the ascending authem of loving and believing hearts finds its way into the chorus of the redeemed in heaven.

Chignons, rats, etc., were worn 200 cars ago.

A Smart Yankee.

"What do you charge for boarding?" asked a tall Green Mountain boy, as he walked up to the bar of a second-rate hotel in New York. "What do you ask a week for boarding and lodging?"

"Five dollars."

"Five dollars! That's too much; but I suppose you will allow for the times I'm absent from dinner and supper?"

"Certainly—thirty-seven and a half cents for each meal"

Here the conversation ended, and the Yankee took up his quarters for two weeks. During this time he lodged and breakfasted at the hotel, but did not take either dinner or supper, saying his business detained him in another portion of the town.

At the expiration of the two weeks he again went up to the bar and said:

"Spose we settle that account—I'm going in a few minutes."

The landlord handed him the bill.

"Two weeks' board at $5 a week, $10"

"Here, stranger," said the Yankee, this is not right."

"How so, sir?"

"You've made a mistake! you've not deducted the time I was absent from dinner and supper—fourteen days, two meals per day—twenty eight meals at thirty seven and a half cents each—$10 50. If you've not the fifty cents in change that's due me, I'll take a drink, if you please, and the balance in cigars"

The Undeveloped Wealth of the West.

The editor of the Milwaukee Sentinel in 'A few notes on a visit to California,' says: "I speak what I have deliberately considered, when I say that the great mining interests, the real wealth of the western states and territories, as immense as it has been estimated, lies untouched and unexplored to this day. Every day new mines are being discovered in localities that are supposed to be barren of the precious metals, and every day some new or less expensive method of extracting them is being found out. Since the completion of the Pacific railroad, quarts mills can be taken to localities that were inaccessible before, and the same great thoroughfare is carrying coal for steam mills into destitute mining regions at a reasonable cost. There are millions of good dust that lies near the earth's surface in California, and other gold producing states, which cannot be had for the lack of water, but will soon be obtained by associated efforts, turning the mountain streams to their legitimate uses. So far the individual miner has paddled his own canoe, washed his own dirt, and dug his own ditches; but in the mining operations of the future, skill, experience, capital, and business capacity are to aid in robbing the earth of its long hidden treasure.

Fattening Fowls for Market.

The fowls design to be fattened should be placed in small, warm coops not too many "huddle together," but so that they can have a limited range. As soon as they become reconcild to their new quarters commence feeding them regularly three times a day—morning, noon, night. In the morning we should feed with cooked corn meal, at noon with cooked oat or barley meal and mashed potatoes; at evening feed with a mush of corn meal cooked in skim milk, if the milk is procurable. It is said this latter feed gives the flesh a rich golden hue. The coops should be kept scrupulously clean, well supplied with gravel, and provided with plenty of fresh water.

If fowls are fed in the manner here indicated, they will fatten in from ten to twelve days, when they should be killed and sent to the market, or else they are liable to disease, and decline rapidly. Old fowls can, in like manner, be fattened perfectly fat in the course of fifteen or twenty days.

HOW MUCH LAND IS NECESSARY TO KEEP A COW.—Wm. Johnson, Allentown, Pa., wishes to keep a cow on half an acre of ground; can he do it?—Yes, if the ground is sufficiently rich and properly managed. Half the ground should be in clover, which will be ready to eat in June and will be ready to eat in June and will last three months; one fourth should be put in corn for fodder, in drills two feet apart, planted quite thickly in the row (twelve grains to the foot), and well hoed and weeded; this may be used occasionally to help out the clover, if necessary. The remainder of the grouud should be put in turnips, or sugar beets, or partly both, and may yield two hundred bushels, which, with the stalks left over, will feed the cow through the winter and until the clover is ready again.—Remember, the tops of the beets and turnips will last quite a time, if used economically. Keep them in a cellar in a heap, well pressed down and covered with boards.

To Debilitated Persons,
To Dispeptics,

Hoofland's German Bitters.

A Bitters without Alcohol or Spirits of any kind.

Is different from all others. It is composed of the pure Juices, or VITAL PRINCIPLE OF ROOTS, HERBS, and BARKS, for, as medicinally termed, Extracts,) the worthless or inert portions of the ingredients not being used. Therefore in one Bottle of this Bitters there is contained as much medicinal virtue as will be found in several gallons or ordinary mixtures. The Roots, &c., used in this Bitters are grown in Germany, their vital principles extracted in that country by a scientific Chemist, and forwarded to the manufactory in this city, when they compounded and bottled. Containing no spirituous ingredients, this Bitters is free from the objections urged against all others: no desire for stimulants can be induced from their use, they cannot make drunkards, and cannot under any circustances, have any but a beneficial effect.

Hoofland's German Tonic.

Was compounded for those not inclined to extreme bitters, and is intended for use in cases when some alcoholic stimulant is required in connection with the Tonic properties of the Bitters. Each bottle of the tonic contains one bottle of the Bitters, combined with pure SANTA CRUZ RUM, and flavored in such a manner that the extreme bitterness of the bitters is overcome forming a preparation highly agreeable and pleasant to the palate, and containing the medicinal virtues of the Bitters. The price of the Tonic is $1,50 per Bottle, which many persons think too high. They must take into consideration that the stimulant used is guaranteed to be of a pure quality. A poor article could be furnished at a cheaper price, but is it not better to pay a little more and have a good article? A medicinal preparation should contain none but the best ingredients; and they who expect to obtain a cheap compound, and be benefitted by it, will most certainly be cheated.

HON. GEORGE W. WOODWARD, formerly Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, at present Member of Congress from Pennsylvania, writes:

PHILADELPHIA, March 16, 1871.

I find "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a good tonic, useful in diseases of the digestive organs, and of great benefit in case of debility and want of nervous action in the system. Yours, truly,
GEO. W. WOODWARD.

HON. JAS. THOMPSON, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania,

PHILADELPHIA, April 28, 1867.

I consider "Hoofland's German Bitters" a valuable medicine in case of attacks of indigestion or Dyspepsia. I can certify this from my own experience of it.

Yours, with respect, JAS. THOMPSON.

HON. GEORGE SHARSWOOD, Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, July 1, 1868.

I have found by experience that "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a very good tonic, relieving dyspeptic symptoms almost directly.

GEORGE SHARSWOOD

HON. JAS. M. WOOD, Ex-Mayor of Williamsport, Pa.

I take great pleasure in recommending "Hoofland's German Tonic" to any one who may be afflicted with Dyspepsia. I had the Dyspepsia so badly it was impossible to keep any food on my stomach, and I became so weak, as not to be able to walk half a mile. Two bottles of tonic effected a perfect cure. JAMES M. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN REMEDIES

Are the medicines you require to purify the Blood, excite the torpid Liver to healthy action, and to enable you to pass safely through any hardships or exposure.

DR. HOOFLAND'S
PODOPHYLLIN,
Or Substitute for Mercury Pills.
TWO PILLS A DOSE.
The Most Powerful, Yet Innocent Vegetable Cathartic Known.

It is not necessary to take a handful of these Pills to produce the desired effect; two of them act quickly and powerfully, cleansing the Liver, Stomach and Bowels all impurities. The principal ingredient is Podophyllin, or the Alcoholic Extract of Mandrake, which is by many times more powerful, acting and searching than the Mandrake itself. Its peculiar action is upon the Liver, cleaning it speedily from all obstructions, with all the power of Mercury, yet free from the injurious results attached to the use of that mineral.

For all diseases, in which the use of a cathartic is indicated, these pills will give entire satisfaction in every case. They NEVER FAIL.

In cases of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia and extreme costiveness, Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters or Tonic should be used in connection with the Pills. The tonic effect of the Bitters or Tonic builds up the system. The Bitters or Tonic purifies the Blood, strengthens the Nerves, regulates the Liver, and gives strength, energy and vigor.

Keep your Bowels active with the Pills, and tone up the system with Bitters or Tonic, and no disease can remain hold, or ever assail you.

Recollect that it is DR. Medical.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, Such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to cold and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it in nowise injures any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the ague district, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of ague medicine. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgements we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remidies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either residence in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the Ague Cure daily.

For Liver Complaints, arise from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

SUNLIGHT.

A blue haze in the distance lies,
The crisp green meadows are newly shorn,
Cloudlets drift in the summer skies
Birds are loud in the fragrant thorn.

The leaves, like lovers, kiss in the breeze;
And over the fields of glossy wheat,
Like ripples glancing on sunny seas,
Light winds dance on their fairy feet.

The river, glimmering to the sun,
Like a forest of Templar lances shows,
Motionless as a kneeling nun,
The gray spire shines from cottage rows.

WOOD'S HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE.—The tenth volume of this periodical opens with the January number, which is before us. Like its predecessors, it is full of substantial home reading which is admirably adapted "to promote knowledge, virtue and temperance." Its contributions for the monthly include a story by Virginia F. Townsend, "The Dead Year of Disaster," by Geo. S. Burleigh; "Wasnington and His Lovers," by Rev. J. B. Wakeley, D. D.; "Newburgh and its Surroundings," by Joel T. Headley; "Going to House keeping," by Efsa Mansfield; "Planning a Career," by Horace Greeley; "City versus Country," by Gail Hamilton; a Temperance Story, by Alice E. Williams; "The Wife of Dr. Franklin," by Jas. Parton; "Enough's Enough," by Thomas K. Beecher, etc, etc. The Household fills a blank that has long existed, by supplying, at a low price, a good Magazine which is but one dollar a year. PETERS' MUSICAL MONTHLY for January comes to us in a new dress. It is printed on thicker paper, and is in every respect superior to its many predecessors. The selections are evidently made with great care, and it is really wonderful how few poor pieces appear among the hundreds that are given. Volume IX commences with the January number. Price 30 cents; or $3 per year. The publisher offers six back numbers for $1, and we advise all our Musical readers to take advantage of the offer. Address,

THE Terre Haute glass company was organize a year ago with a small capital, as an experiment, and commenced operations with a five pot furnace; they are now employing seventy hands in manufacturing black and green hollow ware. It has proved a success, and the demand for this class of goods is in advance of their capacity to meet, and as soon as possible they will build another furnace,

HIRAM S. KELLEY, Constable of Union twp., while riding on horse-back last Friday, was attacked by an unknown man about fifty rods from Col. Herrold's saw mill with the intent as it is supposed for robbery. The man caught the horse at the reins, Mr. Kelley shot after him twice. The thief had not courage enough to continue his depredations but made his escape.—Freeburg Courier.

THE Commissioner of Agriculture in his report proposed that instead of the present wholsale distribution of the annual report of the department, the public printer be authorized to forward it by mail to any party who will send him sixty cents, which will cover the cost of printing and the expense of enveloping and postage. This would be economical for the government, certainly, but would it not be dear to the purchaser?

BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN.

BELLEFONTE, PA.

Wednesday Morning, January 3, 1872.

NEWSPAPER LAWS.

We would call the special attention of postmasters and our subscribers to the followinw synopsis of the newspaper laws:

1. A postmaster is required to give notice by letter, (eturning a paper does not answer the aw,) when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office, and state the reasons for its not being taken; and a neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publishers for payment.

2. Any person who takes a paper fsom the post-office, whether directed to his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the payment.

3. If a person orders his paper to be discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it be taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.

4. If the subscriber orders the paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send it, the subscriber is bound to pay for it, if he takes it out of the post-office. The law proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

5. The Courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima-facie evidence of intentional fraud.

The fine stock of Toys, Photograph Albums, Books and other Holiday goods remaining at the Model Book Store, opposite the Bush House, will be offered the coming week at greatly reduced prices to make room for other novelties.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.—It is our pleasure to announce that a lecture will be delivered by J, Blair Moore in Reynold's Hall, on Friday night next at 7½ o'clock. The lecturer has chosen for his theme, "The Genius of Shakespear."

His many friends and acquaintances dating to a period twenty years past, will require no urging to avail themselves of an opportunity to hear from one, much of whose youth was spent in our town; and the recollection of whose traits and intellectual gifts will assure them of a masterly and scholarly delineation of the great subject selected by the lecturer.

List of Letters remaining in the Bellefonte Post office, and unclaimed, Jan 1, 1872:

Michall Cannon, Will H Chase, Mrs Coup, Annie M Gramley, John Goodfellow, Sigmon Gepk, Geo B Graham, Henry Goodvenendt, Mrs Annie E Henry, Hiram Jones, Irsall Kaufman, John Kain, John Lewis, B J. Lamb, Mrs Myers, Mr Moore, Mr Makee, Hoar McNabb, Amelia Miller, Mary Ellen Myers, Mrs Mary Miller, James Miller, Geo Nyman, Omar Osman, Miss Jennie Patten, Henry Powel, Rev. D. Reilley—2, Patrie T Raley, Wm. Shalce, Henry Smith, Johh G Smith, Samuel Shoemaker, John W Sunday, David Smith, Samuel Stover, Susan Wilkison—2, David Tanyer, Wm Williams, Weitheimer & Bro, Miss Ellen Zeitle.

A BEAUTIFUL CHRISTMAS NUMBER.—We are in receipt of the December Number of the "People's Monthly," of Pittsburg, an illustrated paper gotten up for the Industrial Classes. It still goes on improving, and now challenges comparison with any of the New York illustrated papers. This number is crowded with Christmas cuts, poems, tales, and original contributions, among which we note an "Interview with Camanche Bill," "A Perilous Balloon Ride," "A Christmas Dinner at an Oil Well" "Courtship of Mrs. Craddles," "Angling as a Fine Art," &c. &c. Among the illustrations, the full page representation of a dog "waiting for the hunter's shot," and the three puppies and turtle are especially beautiful This issue of the Monthly was nearly 15,000 copies, and we do not wonder at its popularity among the masses, when the beauty of paper, elegance of typography, variety of original matter, and profusion of cuts are considered. Tis a pure, bright, and wholesome periodical, and should be in every western family; price only $1.50 a year. This number has an eight-page supplement—twenty-four pages is all—and gives ample evidence in all its parts of health and vigor.

AN IMMENSE BUSINESS.—The Seed business, as conducted by the celebrated firm of BRIGGS&BROTHER, at Rochester, New York, is one of the largest in the country, and in its way is undoubtedly the largest in the world. Over 12,000 dealers in different parts of the country and the Dominion, sell their Seeds. Their establishment at Rochester has over 62,000 feet of flooring, and from 200 to 300 persons, according to the season, are employed in packing and putting up the Flower and Vegetable Seeds, which they send by mail to all parts of the country. It takes six presses in constant use to print labels alone; upwards of $40,000 worth of paper is used annually in the manufacture of bags for Seeds, &c.

Their annual Catalogue is most elaborately gotten up, and is embellished with numberless cuts of Flowers and Vegetables, besides being beautifully illustrated with Colored Plates. It also contains instructive hints and information upon the subject of floriculture and agriculture. The new Catalogue for 1872, which will be issued about the 1st of January, promises to be the finest thing of the kind ever published, and we are quite confident that the entire edition of 150,000 will be used up in short order. To old customers the Catalogue will be sent free, while to new ones, an inclosure of twenty-five cents will be required. And even in such cases, where an order for one dollar's worth of Seeds is sent, twenty-five cents' worth of Seeds in addition are remitted. BRIGGS & BROTHER prepay all orders by mail and by reference to their Catalogue, when it is issued, it will be seen that they give all their customers the most liberal inducements to obtain one or both of their beautiful Chromo Lithographs of Flowers, the cost of which at retail would be from $3 to $5, but which only cost BRIGGS & BROTHER, printed as they are by tens of thousands, about seventy-five cents each. We advise our readers to send for one of BRIGGS & BROTHER'S Catalogues.

For the REPUBLICAN.

IS THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION A SUBJECT WORTHY OF DISCUSSION.

Less than a week ago, we would have supposed that almost any sane man not a slave to the habit of intemperance, would have answered in the affirmative. It remained, however, for the majority of the Churchville Literary Society to decide otherwise. A member at its last meeting, having proposed for debate the question of "Total Abstinence" from the use of intoxicating drink; the members of that body unanimously declined its discussion.

What startled us most, was the coolness, and indifference, with which the question was disposed of. While succeeding questions were rejected or adopted, with at least some, show of earnest discussion; this, was "floored" without a single dissenting voice. Not one to respond, yes, that is a question of rapidly increasing interest to each of us; let us have it talked over, let us hear some of the arguments that can be brought to bear pro, and con.

But no; it is a "one sided question" and therefore, not worthy of discussion. Let us take up something that will improve the mind; something that will lead to scientific investigation, etc.

In answer to the first objection, we ask: On which side is the common practice at this day? On which side does the practice of our young men promise to be. If the Rum fiend is allowed to go on in its work of building hotels, and increasing the facilities for drinking, and making drunk.

It is a fact, that drunkenness in every form, from the moderate drinker to the habitual drunkard, is fast becoming the rule in our valley; while total abstinence is the rarest exception. While every other part of the country is becoming wide awake to the "Temperance Reform" movement, we lag behind. Fathers, sons, husbands, brothers, all drifting—or in imminent danger of drifting away on the same destructive tide, and we heed it not.

We would be loath to believe, that the gentleman who offered this objection, and indeed a majority of the assemblage were not on the right side on this question. But of what practical benefit is a candle, if its "light is hid under a bushel." How much better is an apple tree than a thorn bush if it bears no fruit?

We must let our light shine. Good men, with hearts right on this question, dare, no longer look with apathy and indifference, on the ravages of this vice. They may not Pilate like—wash their hands of this matter, and practically say to the drunkard, and drunkard-maker. "We are innocent of the crime you commit, of the misery your traffic entails upon others. See ye to it." Professors of religion, members of Christs church, cannot without blame—furnish and let houses for the sale of this soul-destroying beverage. Houses behind whose bars the bloated wrecks of former manhood, deal out by measure, the liquid fire, which is scaring the conscience, and robbing many a noble character of every manly attribute. A fire, which is scorching and blighting the happiness of count less homes, and drying up the very life blood in the bosom of many a devoted wife and mother. In answer to the second objection, "let us discuss something that will improve the mind." We ask; what are the most brilliant mental attainments, without good morals? That man had better never have risen above the level of the brute mentally, who intends to make a beast of himself morally. Who cannot point to men in our own County whose earlier years gave promise of a brilliant literary career, men who in the meridian of their day might have shone forth stars of the first magnitude, in the glory of our nations great ones; had not the demon of the still claimed them as its devotees; and the wealth of their intellect, been well nigh lost in the depths of the wine-cup.

How could you, members of the Churchville Literary Society, so cooly ignore the discussion of a question so fraught with the weal or woe of countless numbers. Why not discuss it just as you do any other "one sided" question; give the moderate drinker the benefit of all the arguments that can be brought in favor of our "occasional glass," and let our young men, and boys, see where this curse of humanity begins, that ends in debauchary, degradation and death. What a pity, that in an assemblage having among its number, many good citizens, a member of the teachers of our youth a "graduate" and a Theological student, (tell it not in Goth) there should not be found one, to plead the cause of the drunkard, for the temperance cause is the cause of the drunkard. Haste to the rescue then, friends of moral reform; the hosts of vice are marshaling for the conflict and as the worst features of all others combined, do not equal the blighting ravages of this single vice of intemperance, "let us fight neither with small nor great, save only with the King."

SPECTATOR.

POTTERS MILLS, Dec. 20, 1871.

CARRIER'S ADDRESS.

A YEAR has swiftly passed away
Since last, upon fair New Year's day,
The Carrier came, with eager feet,
His liberal patrons all to greet;
Rewarded then by generous hand
With that which rules on sea and land,
He humbly dares once more to bring
Around his annual offering.

Hail Eighteen Hundred Seventy-Two!
What will it bring for me and you?
Mayhap its opening, now so bright,
Will close on us in darkest night.
We cannot tell—God made us all,
And we must go when He shall call,
As they have gone whose race was run
With the buried year of Seventy-One!

But, on this happy, happy day,
Let's drive all gloomy thoughts away;
And, thanking Heaven for bounteous cheer,
Ask Him to guide us through the year.
Thus we may calmly, boldly wait
The pelting storms of adverse fate;
Or gladly take the joys that come
To cluster round each happy home,

And now, what next? what shall I say
To lengthen out this labored lay?
We might across the ocean glide,
And stand a moment by the side
Of Emperor Nap, whose sudden fall
From high estate, was but the call
Of Freedom to her hosts to stay
The course of his despotic sway.

From France to Germany, and behold!
We see King Wilhelm, grim and old,
And Bismarck, too, that mighty mind,
Who, from Berlin to Paris, lined
His way with corpses, ere he won
The prize from Gaul's imperial son
Of German unity—the gain
Which Kaisers long had sought in vain.

Then on to Russia we might sweep,
And at her sovereign take a peep;
To Austria, too, a moment go,
And steal a glance at Francis Jo;
Both, rulers of despotic power,
Who, every day and every hour,
Uneasy rest for fear each crown
May follow Nap's and totter down.

The Turk, whose life has all been spent
In the far distant Orient,
We'll leave within his luscious harem,
Lest, looking at his wives, we scare 'em;
And take a glance at Italy,
Who boasts that she is free, is free,
From Alps to Adriatic sea.
Victor Emanuel lays his hand
Upon the Pope's most sacred land,
And while the Pontiff seeks a home
The King sits down in sov'reign Rome.

Mont Cenis Tunnel might be noted,
But you'll be tired being toted
All round the world in search of news,
(Besides you might wear out your shoes;)
And so we'll get back home once more
Where Justice reigns from shore to shore,
And where Columbia's flag doth wave
O'er land of free and home of brave.

The year just dead, how full of fate!
To nations, communities and State!
But how shall I the wonders tell
That have of late the world befel?
The greatest bard himself might fail
To tell aright the mighty tale,
And so I'll leave these deeds of man
For some new Milton's magic pen.

* * * * * * * * * *

The situation now at home
Dispels all thoughts of grief or gloom,
For Grant sits in the chair of State
In spite of copperheadish hate;
He rules the nation, wise and well,
And hearts with exultation swell
To think a man so great as he,
Should be the leader of the Free.

In Pennsylvania, Governor Geary,
Able and fearless, never weary,
Administers the Keystone's laws,
And makes with labor common cause.
Though copperheads and rebels sneer
They know we've got them by the ear,
And there we'll hold them till they feel
We rule them, for the people's weal.

Played out is old "Democracy,"
The pet of Aristocracy,
Like Sweeny, Tweed and Hall and Connolly,
A set of scamps, the most infernally
Corrupt, that ever went unhung
Or had their deeds by poet sung.
We'll give them fits, when next they meet us,
If, by that time, the rope don't cheat us.

In Centre county now, the fact is,
We're crushed with Democratic taxes;
Six mills upon the dollar seems
A sum to think of in our dreams;
And their collectors, Lord, what whelps!
Give out, when kicked, most mournful yelps,
But fail to pay what they have stolen
Though in the people's money roilin'.

But, laying politics aside,
Let's take a little local ride:
Bellefonte, our own dear little town,
(I love her well, I'm free to own,)
Sits like a Queen amid her hills,
Where babbling founts and laughing rills
And pastures green and woodlands rare
Pronounce her fairest of the fair.

Warned by Chicago's burning fate,
Which made that city desolate,
Against the dread Destroyer's power,
The "Logan" and "Undine" will shower.
"Brave boys are they," and while we sleep,
They watch and ward most kindly keep,
And when rings out the cry of Fire!
They to the rescue—"never tire!"

Our ladies, too, the sweetest girls
That ever wore chignons or curls,
Are always found where duty calls,
In cottage or in palace halls.
God bless the girls! their dancing eyes,
Transport me to the seventh skies,
And some day now, I tell you certain,
One of them shall be "Mrs. Curtin."

The latest thing just come to hand,
Is the new darkey cornet band;
Our colored friends, play well, they say,
And may, perhaps, be out to-day.

How Bellefonte copperheads will stare,
And how the "Court House Ring" will swear!
But let them sweat—'Tis New Year's day
And "nigs" have rights as well as they.

Of our "Material Interests"
Of which the world has heard,
It might, perhaps, but justice be
To say one little word.
There's Valentine's great iron works
Linn & M'Coy's likewise,
Whose furnaces and rolling mills
On every side arise;

And Mann's great axe establishment—
The Glass and Wire-works, too,
And Curtin's, on the railroad,
These all are known by you
Our Foundries and Machine Shops
Our mills and everything,
Our Churches and our Free Schools—
To these we'll ever cling.

As for the wealth of noble Centre,
It can't be beaten, we will venture,
In the State or in the nation,
Nor if you count in all creation.
Think of our coal and iron ore,
Furnaces, Forges, Mills—a score,
Where labor's toiling sons find work
To earn their clothing, beef and pork.

Of many more we'd like to write,
But these we think sufficient quite
To let our sister counties see,
The fruits of honest industry,
And that where labor is protected,
Nor rich, nor poor need be neglected;
"Labor is wealth" the Statesmen say
But you must protect, to make it pay.

And now, good-bye, old Seventy-one,
Bent and decrepid—dead—begone!
Join with the years that have perished long
And the hours wasted—a countless throng.
Henceforth, thou art numbered with the things that were
We have naught for thee now, but a silent prayer
That thy deeds and thy sins may all be forgiven,
By the pitying heart of compassionate Heaven.

* * * * * * * * * *

As thus we close our humble lay
We welcome in this New Year's day,
And may it bring to all much joy,
Is the sincere wish of the Carrier Boy.

JAMES C. CURTIN.

There is, probably, no way in which we can benefit our readers more than by recommending to them for general use Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. It is adapted to almost all the purposes of a Family Medicine; and as a specific for coughs, colds, whooping cough, soreness of the chest, lame stomach, rheumatism, spitting of blood, and all lung difficulties, it has no equal that ever we saw or heard of.

The propriety of giving condition medicine to horses, cattle and sheep, was discussed and admitted by many of the Agricultural Societies throughout the State last Fall, and we believe that in every case but one they decided in favor of Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders. Good judgment.

To the Citizens of Centre County and Elsewhere.

Your attention is particularly requested to the following certificate referring to those old established remedies, "HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS," and "HOOFLAND'S GERMAN TONIC," from that well known citizen,

IRA C. MITCHELL, ESQ.:

"BELLEFONTE, PA., Oct. 27, 1871.

Sir:—I have just had the pleasure of meeting your Agent, the first representative of "Hoofland's German Bitters" and "Hoofland's German Tonic," it has ever been my good fortune to meet. For many years I have been purchasing and using them to the great comfort of myself, family and friends, having commenced their use on the recommendations of the Supreme Court Judges of this State. It affords me pleasure to have the opportunity to voluntarily recommend the same to all of my friends and acquaintances who may be suffering from Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Billiousness or affections of the Liver, of any kind.

Very Respectfully,
IRA C. MITHELL."

These medicines are and have been well known to the community for the last twenty-five years, as genuine, reliable and deserving remedies for the diseases mentioned in the above certificate. Those afflicted should not fail to use them. Sold by all Druggists. C. M. EVANS, Proprietor, 631, Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa. 3-50-1y

SPECIAL NOTICES.

A CARD.—We take this method of saying that there is no truth in the reports that have been circulated, "that we intend quitting the coal business as soon as our present supply is sold out." On the contrary we have on hands now and intend to keep on hand a well selected stock of the best Anthracite coal in the market.

TO THOSE WHO ARE BOWED DOWN by nervous Debility, and despair of ever recovering the vigor and men of manhood we earnestly recommend DR. WALKERS CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS. Before they have finished the first bottle, they will feel the restorative principle at work in every portion of their broken-down systems and hope will spring up in their hearts. No case of Dyspepsia Biliousness, Intermittent Fever, Rheumatism, Gout or kidney disease, can resist this unequalled vegetable tonic which is unpolluted by any distilled or fermented liquor.

CAPTAIN JAMES GALLAGHER.

Steamboat Captain, of Pittsburgh, Pa. writes: "The inventor of MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS is a benefactor to the human race. I was a victim to the worst form of Dyspepsia; my health failed to such an extent that my Physicians pronounced me incurable. I had used all sorts of remedies and even took a voyage to California but nothing relieved me. When MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS was recommended I refused to use it; but my friends insisting, I at last yielded. I am thankful that I did so, for it cured me, and I am now as well, hale and strong as I was fifteen years ago."

WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE.

Where can patients look for relief? The experience of every Dyspeptic tends to prove that the proper method of treatment of that wide spread disease, Dyspepsia, is not to be found in any of the regular schools of medicine. You cannot find any three physicians who will agree upon this point; each has some pet theory of his own; and each patient is but in truth a subject for experiment. The only effectual remedy for this terrible scourge is

MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS.

It alone is certain and uniform it its effects. It has cured thousands and will cure you. Try It!!
